

deltamint.app — Alpaca branding review

Reviewed: 24 September 2026, by DeltaMint (Optvest Inc.) Against: Alpaca OAuth Due Diligence Questionnaire v3, page 1:

Alpaca's name, brand, and services must not be referenced or used anywhere on the website or in partner agreements. Partners should use neutral, generic language—such as "link your brokerage account" throughout their website. Partners can mention Alpaca on their website only when showing brokerage integrations partners. Marketing materials should refrain from referencing or using Alpaca's name, without prior written approval.

Scope

Every page a visitor can reach on deltamint.app without signing in:

SURFACE	PAGES
Homepage	/
About	/about
Legal	/terms, /privacy
Blog	/blog and all 15 published articles
Sign-up and sign-in	dashboard.deltamint.app/register, /login, password reset

Searched for the name in text, image alt text, page source and metadata, and checked images for the Alpaca logo or likeness.

Findings

#	WHERE	FINDING	ACTION
1	Homepage, brokerage section	The Alpaca logo is shown as one of DeltaMint's brokerage integration partners.	Kept — this is the integrations display the questionnaire permits. We will replace it with Alpaca's official logo file, or remove it, on request.
2	Homepage, brokerage section	The call-to-action read "Connect your Alpaca account now — free".	Changed to the neutral "Link your brokerage account — free".
3	Homepage, brokerage section	The section was headed "Connect your broker".	Relabelled "Brokerage integrations", so the one place the name appears is plainly the integrations display the questionnaire permits.

#	WHERE	FINDING	ACTION
4	Terms of Service	Does not name Alpaca. Refers to "your broker" and "your broker's own connection flow".	None needed.
5	Privacy Policy	Does not name Alpaca.	None needed.
6	About page	Does not name Alpaca. Describes the connection as "your broker's own sign-in and consent screen".	None needed.
7	Blog (15 articles)	No mention of Alpaca in any title, description or body.	None needed.
8	Sign-up, sign-in, password reset	No mention of Alpaca.	None needed.
9	Titles, descriptions, share image, sitemap	No mention of Alpaca.	None needed.

Result

After the changes above, Alpaca appears in one place on the public site: the homepage section headed "Brokerage integrations", where its name and logo sit under the label "Supported brokers". There is no Alpaca name, logo or reference to Alpaca's services anywhere else, including the About page, the Terms and the Privacy Policy.

Elsewhere the site uses neutral language — "link your brokerage account", "your broker", "sign in with your brokerage login" — and states on every page that DeltaMint is a software tool, not a broker-dealer, and does not provide investment advice.

Inside the signed-in application, Alpaca is named where the user connects and manages their Alpaca account, including the authorization disclosure shown before the redirect to Alpaca. That is the integration itself, not marketing.

We will amend or remove the integration listing, or any wording, on request.
